Upland park may be new home to YMCA

By Kimberly Heinrichs

After seven years of looking for a home in Upland, the YMCA may settle in Memorial Park.

Although the spot was rejected when it first was suggested in 1980, the city's Parks and Recreation Committee recently recommended the City Council approve the northwest corner of the park for the YMCA building.

"If we could get Memorial Park I think that would be super. I can't think of a better spot," said Bob Heuther, general director of the West End YMCA.

"We think it's a very desirable location," agreed George Renworth, chairman of the Upland YMCA branch. "It's obviously surrounded by parkland, which is very nice, and it fronts on Foothill (Boulevard), which gives the YMCA great exposure and it's centrally located."

So, with all this enthusiasm, why did it take seven years to have the recommendation come to council?

"Back in 1980 when it went to the recreation and mayor's advisory commissions, they had some concerns that it wasn't the best location," said the city's Recreation Director Larry Thornburg.

But he said he never got a concrete reason not to locate the complex in the park.

"There wasn't any decision as to whether it should or shouldn't go in Memorial Park," Thornburg said. "At some point it was just kind of dropped."

But two years ago, the West End YMCA began actively searching for a site again, Huether said.

This time the Y was offered land in the future John E. McCarthy Park, which now is the city's old landfill. A lease for $1 a year even was signed, Mayor Richard Anderson said.

But environmental problems, including reports that the landfill

Upland teachers will hear offer

By Marianne Aiken

A settlement was reached last week on what Upland High School teachers will be offered if they return to work there next year.

An 11-point position statement issued jointly by the Upland Unified School District and a teachers bargaining team was to be distributed to Upland High School teachers and teachers in Upland's nine elementary schools and two junior highs the following day.

Neither side would comment on the settlement when the two teams emerged from a final negotiation session.

High school teachers had until this Tuesday to decide whether to stick with their same jobs next year or transfer to other jobs in the Chaffey Joint Union High School District.

As of last week, a majority of teachers had not made a definite decision about where they would go, said Max McCormick, head of the high school art department.

Upland artisan follows ancient gold-leaf tradition

By Kimberly Heinrichs

From Egyptian tombs to West Valley law firms, artisans have been using miniscule sheets of pounded gold to accent furnishings and signs for hundreds of years.

Gold leafing is not something one does on the spur of the moment, said Jack Leyden, owner of Image Sign Co. in Upland.

"You don't get into goldleafing until after five years" of practice, he said. Along the way, he made a lot of expensive mistakes, he said.

As a sign painter, Leyden sticks to gold leafing signs, mostly for professional offices in the area, he said.

At approximately $500 for a window, there is not a great demand for the art out here, he said. In the seven years since he has been offering his gold-leafing services professionally, Leyden had completed about two jobs a year, he said.

Gold leafing is expensive because the lettering is made of pure gold. Leyden's most popular shade is a 23-karat deep gold, which fluctuates with the gold market, but costs about $1.40 now for a paper-thin 3 by 3-inch sheet.

After applying a gelatin and water mixture to his glass surface to act as a glue, Leyden simply lays the wispy sheets over his outline of the lettering. After letting that layer dry, he applies one to two more coats to make sure the gold will be solid.

Although it starts out as crinkled as discarded gold-toned chocolate wrappers, the gold smooths out as it sets.

To form the letter, Leyden uses an oil-based paint to paint over the outline of the letter from the back in order to preserve it. Then he simply washes the excess gold away with water. And just like that, little flakes of gold slip to the floor where they are swept up.

But the painter promises the finished product will be much more permanent.

"A gold-leaf job on glass will hold forever," he promised.

contains considerable amounts of harmful chemicals, scared the YMCA off.

Even if the ground were stable and there were no problems with toxins, it would have been difficult to sell the idea of locating the building on a landfill during fund raisers, Heuther said.

The next suggestion, Thornburg said, was a site just east of Benson Avenue between 14th and 15th streets. But little did he know that while he was talking to the YMCA about that site, other city departments were looking at it for the new police station.

Although there was talk of putting the YMCA to the north of the station, safety and access concerns and the fact that the new site was just on the edge of the Cable Airport flight path nixed that idea.

"It's coming full circle now," said Anderson, who said he first suggested Memorial Park as the location back in 1980 when he was on a YMCA committee before he became mayor.

should be part of a new, unified school district in Upland.

Teachers anxious about negotiations packed the Upland unified school board meeting last week for the third week in a row, but no one spoke this time. The statement was issued several hours after the meeting.

The agreement covers class size, teaching assignments, health and welfare benefits, placement on the yet-to-be-negotiated salary schedule, long-term service retirement benefits, length of the work day and the work year, grievance procedures, personal necessity leave, and the selection of department heads.

Upland schools chief George Renworth said there might not be any department heads, but instructional deans covering more than one department.

Upland teachers will work 7½-hour days, 180 days per year, plus two in-service days before school begins and two more during the school year.

High school teachers will teach 140 pupils a day over the course of five periods.

Elementary school teachers in Upland will teach an average of 28.5 students and junior high teachers will have classes of 27.

Upland junior high and high school teachers will get one preparation period in the six-period day.

Every teacher in Upland will get a fringe benefit package of $3,858.60, with a specific hospital/medical program remaining to be negotiated.

Every teacher will make at least as much money next year as they make now.

Teachers in Upland's elementary schools and junior highs with bachelor's degrees plus 75 college credits will be paid as if they had a master's degree.

The high school teachers currently have this benefit through the Chaffey district and will keep it in Upland.

Teachers with master's degrees will get $350 stipends and those with doctorate degrees, $500.

Deadline for spending new jail funds set

By Patrick McGreevy

The state has given San Bernardino County until Sept. 1, 1989, to spend $30 million in state funds for a new West Valley jail, County Supervisor Jon Mikels said recently.

Armed with the new deadline, an extension from an original Dec. 31, 1987, deadline, Mikels said he would ask his fellow supervisors to begin searching for an alternate jail site to the one presently proposed off Haven Avenue in Rancho Cucamonga.

Until Mikels' recent meeting in Sacramento with the executive director of the state Board of Corrections, Norma Lammers, county officials believed they had only until Dec. 31 to begin construction on the 800-bed jail or they would lose $30 million in state-bond revenue.

Although Rancho Cucamonga residents and politicians have offered strong opposition to building the jail in the city's burgeoning downtown, county officials feared they did not have enough time to move the jail and still meet the deadline for the state funds.

"My purpose in being there (Sacramento) was to find out if the County of San Bernardino could take the time necessary to locate a new site and build the jail without jeopardizing the state money," Mikels said. "It was very successful."

Mikels and County Administrative Officer Harry Mays told Lammers that in the six years since the city of Rancho Cucamonga endorsed the jail site near the intersection of Haven Avenue and Foothill Boulevard, the character of the area has changed. The area currently is developing with restaurants, theaters and offices — and soon may be the location of a new City Hall.

Mikels said Lammers understood it may take more than a year to select a new site for the jail, complete an environmental-impact report for the new site, and design and arrange the county's share of financing for the $60-million project.

"Ours is not the first problem with siting a custody facility," Mikels said upon returning from Sacramento.

Rancho Cucamonga Mayor Dennis Stout said that the new deadline is "wonderful news."

"One of the things that we thought was an obstacle was that the state funds were site specific," Stout said. "It sounds to me like the state is being more flexible. I'm very encouraged."

The following Monday, Mikels was to ask the county Board of Supervisors to begin searching for a new site for a new West Valley jail.

"I think we have enough time now to do what is necessary," Mikels said.

Deadline set for Writer's Day Contest

March 11 is the deadline for entries in Chaffey College's 1987 Writer's Day Contest.

Fiction and poetry must be postmarked by that date to qualify for the $50 first-prize awards.

The contest has three divisions: community members, Chaffey College students and high school students.

Each division contains five categories: poetry, 40 line maximum; non-fiction essay, 2,000 word maximum; short story, 4,000 word maximum; and children's short story, 2,500 word maximum.

Contestants may submit two entries per category, with the exception of poetry, which allows three per writer.

Upland birdman on warpath over red sapsuckers

By Kimberly Heinrichs

"The birdman of Upland" is on the warpath, but his cause is destined for defeat.

Henry Childs Jr. is out to save the winter habitat of the red-naped and red-breasted sapsuckers he has discovered in trees along the Euclid Avenue Parkway.

The birds, rare to this area, migrate here for the winter months, he said. But their stay in the pepper trees between 22nd and 24th streets is threatened by the blades of the Upland city tree crew.

"These trees were never trimmed this radically before," said Childs, explaining that the birds need the branches for cover. "If they stop right where they are now, the birds will be fine."

He even wrote a letter to the city asking the crews to wait to cut the branches until March, after the birds have flown home.

But General Services Director Ken Hoover said the city has no intention of stopping the trimming. He said his crews cut the pepper trees back severely every five years in order to avoid branches falling down and inspiring liability suits.

"We have a lot of joggers up and down (the parkway) and a lot of children on bicycles," he said.

Hoover said that after reading Childs' letter, he instructed his employees to look out for nests of the unusual birds.

But Childs said the crews won't find nests, because the birds are here to escape the cold and eat, not start families.

As woodpeckers, the birds bore into the tree trunks with their beaks, extracting the sap. They seem to prefer the pepper trees to the untrimmed grevillea oaks across the street, he said.

"I've noticed them on and off for 10 years, but the evidence is that they've been coming here for longer," said Childs, who is field trip chairman with the Audubon Society of Pomona Valley and teacher of bird biology and appreciation classes at Chaffey College.

He explained that the red-naped sapsucker is native to the northern Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Northwest. Just a few of them make it to Southern California, Childs said. The red-breasted bird is from the San Bernardino mountain range or the Sierras, he said.

"As I walked by I heard its toenails in the bark," he said.

Without the branches to protect them from their predators the shy birds will most likely leave the parkway, he said.

"I think the sapsuckers will just have to move up the hill to other trees," he said.

Margaret Stewart selected to post

The San Bernardino Republican Party has selected Margaret Stewart of Upland as vice chairwoman.

Selected as party chairman was Sidney King of Victorville.

Don Moist of Yucaipa was selected as second vice chairman.

Al Miller and Hal Boring, both of San Bernardino, were elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Other West Valley members of the party Central Committee include Jim Frost of Rancho Cucamonga; Don Donnelly, Jerome Johnson and Vicki Porto, all of Upland; and Narlene Douma, Jim and Marguerite Fatland and June Wallin, all of Ontario. All serve two-year terms that end in 1989.

Binoculars in hand, birdlover Henry Childs Jr. is unable to spot the unusual birds whose migration hideaway in the Euclid Avenue Parkway pepper trees has been destroyed by the recent work of Upland tree-trimming crews.

Poverty also found locally

By Mike Krapfl

Southern California's freeways are not the only connection between the lofty foothills of Alta Loma and the poverty of inner-city Los Angeles.

In both places, people need help.

And, in both places, Alta Lomans Glenn and Sandra Swain give it.

Whether it's in their barred and graffiti-covered office along South-Central L.A.'s Figueroa Street, or in their new office in Rancho Cucamonga's First Baptist Church, the Swains say it's their duty to help those who need.

"In fact," Sandra said recently in the near-dark of their L.A. office, "our help is probably more needed over there in Rancho Cucamonga."

Considering the Swains' estimate that they've given away 30-million pounds of free groceries in South-Central Los Angeles since 1978 — not to mention shelter and hot meals — Sandra's assumption of Rancho Cucamonga's need might seem surprising.

"But it's not," Sandra said. "There's a new low-income class in Alta Loma that needs help."

That class includes former employees of Kaiser Steel, single mothers, senior citizens and even Chaffey College students, she said.

"All these people never thought they'd be low-income," she said, "but they've all come to us for help."

In Rancho Cucamonga, that help usually comes in the form of a food bag containing canned goods, meats, vegetables and dairy products.

Glenn and Sandra Swain first began efforts to help those in need at this office in South-Central Los Angeles.

The Swains calculate they help 30 Rancho Cucamonga families every month. They also distribute food and house up to 10 individuals in Fontana's Peace in the Valley Church.

To do all that, the Swains "use my savings, my family's savings and my friends' savings," Sandra said.

Glenn, who works with the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power to support Sandra, their two daughters and the countless needy they look after, said, "I don't know how long we can keep doing it."

"But we take it day by day," he said. "And, we've always gotten through in the past."

The Swains' Samaritan past began in December 1977 when a boutique Glenn had started in South-Central L.A. was robbed for the third time.

The two subsequently decided the location was more suited to charity than commerce and began their new vocation by distributing 5,000 pounds of surplus government cheese they managed to transport from Northern California.

Because Sandra was working as a line assistant with Pacific Bell at the time, it took the couple two weeks to distribute all the cheese.

"But from that time on," Sandra said as she gestured toward the gray walls separating her from the busy Los Angeles street outside, "this place became known as a place to get free cheese."

It soon became a place to get butter, honey, rice and flour as well.

Mikels elected to 2nd term as SCAG board president

By Patrick McGreevy

PASADENA — San Bernardino County Supervisor Jon Mikels recently became the first person elected by the Southern California Associated Governments executive board to a second term as the board's president.

"It's a first and I'm very happy about it," said Mikels, 2nd District supervisor.

Mikels' re-election took place at the Pasadena Hilton, where SCAG held its 21st annual general assembly, which drew about 400 Southern California politicians.

Mikels completed his first-year presidency as a city representative. Until last month, Mikels was a Rancho Cucamonga city councilman.

Each year the presidency of the six-county planning and advisory group rotates between a city official and a county official.

With Mikels' election last year to the county board, fellow supervisors nominated him as their representative to the SCAG executive board. Because all other county representatives on SCAG's executive board had already served one year as president, Mikels was eligible to succeed himself, he said.

SCAG is made up of elected officials from the counties of Orange, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Riverside, Imperial and Ventura.

Mikels said SCAG's top priority this year will be to finish projections on the growth of Southern California's population in the next 23 years.

Last year SCAG released a preliminary report using historic trends to predict that the six-county area's population may

FPPC stops probe of Lyons' conduct

By Mike Krapfl

The state's Fair Political Practices Commission has found no evidence that Foothill Fire Protection District board member John Lyons was guilty of misconduct during last November's election, the FPPC's media director said recently.

Lynn Montgomery said the commission has therefore stopped its investigation of Lyons.

Fellow board member Kevin Eggleston had claimed Lyons sent out postcards accusing him of misuse of office.

Lyons responded to the FPPC's statement by saying, "I knew all along I would be cleared."

The decision, however, isn't likely to stop the finger-pointing that has split the fire district's board in recent months, Lyons said.

"I've continually been a whistle-blower and will continue to be one," Lyons said in reference to the allegations he made against Eggleston, an unsuccessful Rancho Cucamonga City Council candidate in November.

During the election campaign, Lyons accused Eggleston of using his position as a fire district board member in an attempt to become the district's chief in 1984.

Eggleston has repeatedly denied the charges.

Despite the denials, a political postcard was mailed just before November's election asking voters to "vote no on Mr. Eggleston" because of his "self-interest agendas."

Eggleston claimed Lyons sent the card.

Because of handwriting samples that Eggleston claims link Lyons with the mailing of at least one of the postcards, the fire board has censured Lyons.

The board also asked the FPPC to investigate Lyons' alleged involvement with the postcards for violations of the California Election Code and the Political Reform Act.

The two election laws require senders of political material to clearly identify themselves.

The postcard allegedly sent by Lyons was signed Firefighters for Better Government.

Montgomery said the state's election law applies only to those who send more than 200 pieces of political mail. She said there was no evidence that more than 200 of the "vote-no" cards were mailed.

She said that if the district can prove more than 200 of the cards were sent, the FPPC might resume its investigation.

Lyons, who said the decision to stop investigation "clears me of everything," said he will go before the board at its Feb. 17 meeting to ask its members to overturn their censure of his conduct.

grow from 12.8 million in 1985 to 18.2 million by 2010.

Mikels said cities, counties and other public agencies are going over the projections and suggesting factors that would adjust the numbers up or down.

"We're in the process of including other intervening variables that may help us reach a more accurate projection," Mikels said.

He said the final report will be extremely important to counties and cities, Mikels said.

Advisory Commission to be revised

By Mike Krapfl

The lines separating the interests of Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda are growing fainter in Rancho Cucamonga's municipal code.

Although the three communities' physical boundaries and planning boundaries remain bold, the representational boundaries are likely to be blurred when the City Council votes to revise the city's Advisory Commission.

The current commission has 15 members: five from each of Rancho Cucamonga's three communities.

Under the proposed revision, nine people — only one of whom will specifically represent each community — will sit as advisers to the City Council and Planning Commission.

Councilman Chuck Buquet, who along with Councilwoman Deborah Brown was responsible for rewriting the commission's charter, explained the reduction of community voice recently by saying, "It's our belief the city is in transition and needs a more unified, big-picture approach."

Jim Banks, an Etiwanda resident who resigned his position from the commission when he learned the council is considering changing its charter, called the reduction of community representation a "breach of promise."

City founders, he explained, promised to recognize and give a voice to each of the three communities that comprise Rancho Cucamonga.

Mayor Dennis Stout said that kind of geographic orientation on the commission has been a problem.

Before he considered a first reading of the proposed changes in the commission last week, Stout said, "I think the city's problems today are more issue-oriented and I think this (new ordinance) addresses that."

Besides criticizing the new ordinance because it blurs community lines, Banks said the ordinance is weak because it doesn't require the city's elected officials to refer anything to the commission.

"In the past they (the City Council or Planning Commission) haven't given us much of anything to do and this ordinance certainly isn't going to change that," Banks said.

Stout admitted the commission hadn't been used

Courageous young woman fights biggest challenge

By Suzanne Sproul

Mikko Mayeda has fought back pain and adversity before, but her biggest challenge in her eight-year battle with multiple sclerosis was overcoming the death of her mother.

When Mayeda's mother died about a year ago, the 26-year-old Ontario woman said she was faced with the frightening prospect of being alone for the first time in her life.

"You have to understand, I had a very sheltered life. I never had independence. My mother was my caregiver. In the 10 years that I have been sick I've never experienced so much pain in my life. The greatest battle of all was when my mom died," she said.

Mayeda suffers from multiple sclerosis and related problems. She is legally blind and until recently was confined to a wheelchair. Many West Valley residents know her because of her award-winning horseback riding.

Despite her physical limitations, Mayeda rides her mounts with the help of radio signals. Her accomplishments include being a four-time state handicapped champion, 1983 national equestrian champion in Texas, 1984 international Olympics champion in New York and winner of the Michigan State University meet.

"I was training for the riding championships in Michigan when my mom died. I kept on training because I wanted the gold medal to be my memorial to her. The community donated money for me to go to Michigan and right now I want to thank everyone," she said.

After the competition, Mayeda's health failed.

home for 8½ months. For that whole year everything seemed to die. I lost my mother, my home and my possessions. I had screaming tantrums in the hall of the home because I couldn't take being there anymore. I didn't have anywhere to go until a friend of mine from high school let me move in with them. And I didn't even smell horses for one year," she said.

But Mayeda said she realized she had to take control of her life. Her mother was gone and whether she wanted to face it or not, she had a life to lead. So she began to learn to walk again and she enrolled in the International Guiding Eyes dog program at Sylmar.

She now has Glory, her loving guide dog and companion.

"You had to go through a one-month training program and I had to walk five miles a day. That was rough," she said.

Another part of her own recovery program was starting her writing again. Mayeda has written her life story and hopes to have it published.

And it was that life story that interested Caremark Home Health Care of America, who supplies Mayeda with some of her equipment. The company made a $50,000, five-minute video of her life, featuring her riding.

Mayeda said she agreed to the video without thinking that she hadn't ridden in a year. She began extensively training again at the Etiwanda Tri Bred Training Stables because she wanted to look like a champion in the film.

"In the film my horse and I jumped 2½ feet in the air. That's pretty big," she said.

The health care company then flew Mayeda to Arizona for a corporate presentation of her film at a dinner meeting.

"I told them about my story and they gave me a two-minute standing ovation. Because of the film I've been nominated for the 1987 Handicapped American of the Year award," she said.

Concert violinist Yitzhak Perlman received the honors last year. If Mayeda wins the award, she will be invited to the White House.

"I want to go to the White House and my dog will get to go too. My message to the handicapped is not to give up. You just can't," she said.

much, but said "that's been the council's fault."

"In the past the council hasn't given the Advisory Commission a direction or a role."

Stout said, "A direction or a role doesn't come from an ordinance, it comes from us. It's up to us to see they have a role."

Those interested in playing a role on the commission must apply at City Hall, 9320 Base Line Road, before Tuesday.

Robert Rizzo, Rancho Cucamonga's assistant city manager, said that if the council approves the ordinance as expected next week, applicants probably would be interviewed in early February.

The council then would make appointments in early March, he said.

Blood donors needed

The Blood Bank of San Bernardino and Riverside counties is in need of blood to supply the hospitals.

The bank is experiencing a shortage of A positive, B positive and O negative blood because fewer donors than usual have given blood and more has been used.

Right now the bank does not have enough blood to supply the local hospitals. On a normal day the bank needs 250-300 donors to supply the hospitals. On Monday only 200 people donated.

Donors locally can give between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. without an appointment at 1959 E. Fourth St., Ontario, in the Stater Bros. parking lot at the corner of Vineyard Avenue.

For more information, call 987-3158.

According to Paul Sauter of the blood bank, usage is up because of the fast growth in the area.

By that time, 1978, the couple had moved to Rancho Cucamonga from Compton in order to spare their children from being bused to school, Sandra said.

"But we couldn't forget what we started, so we continued working down here (in Los Angeles)," she said.

Their work since has blossomed into a non-profit human-service organization they call Concerned Citizens for Community Improvement. As leaders of the organization, the Swains head a staff of about 25 volunteers.

Why?

"People are always asking us that," Glenn said. "They always want to know why we bother to feed the drug addicts, the alcoholics and the prostitutes."

"The bottom line," he said, "is that God created us and he created them. We're able to help them so we're obligated to do that."

That simple statement is as close as the Swains get to preaching.

"No we don't preach," Sandra said. "We're not priests nor ministers. We're just concerned."

WHERE CUSTOMER IS ALWAYS KING

One enters new worlds when buying diamonds

By SHERI OTT

If you are thinking about owning a diamond, be it a solitaire or a piece of jewelry set with diamonds, you are entering an enchanted world of romance, intrigue, legend and history that was once reserved for kings and emperors. Until a century ago, only the wealthy could afford the luxury of lavishing themselves with diamonds. Fortunately, since the discovery of large deposits in Africa and throughout the world, diamonds are now available in a variety of sizes, shapes, colors and affordable price ranges.

The reasons for buying diamonds are as different as the people who desire them. Through the years, diamonds have provided fulfillment for emotional and practical needs. They are sought after as gifts, status symbols, tokens of romance and even as long-term investments.

Diamonds are beautiful. Their exquisite beauty and mystique provides us with an outward expression of love for "that special one." They create an aura of success and inspire feelings of pride.

Diamonds are durable. A diamond is the hardest substance known to man. Because of this fact, it is resistant to deterioration or deformity and its beauty will be enjoyed for many generations.

Diamonds are rare. Although there have been new discoveries of gem diamond resources, the supply is still limited. It is a fact that larger diamonds are increasingly harder to come by ... when 250 tons of ore is blasted, crushed and processed, chances are there will only be one carat of rough diamonds recovered. And, only 20 percent of all rough diamonds are suitable for cutting into gem diamonds.

Diamonds retain value. While diamond prices may fluctuate with economic conditions, even after years of being worn and enjoyed, a diamond retains value.

The value of a diamond is determined by the "Four C's" — carat weight, color, clarity and cut. These variables explain why diamonds range in value:

Carat — This is the unit of weight used for diamonds, a word derived from carob seeds used to balance scales in ancient times. A carat is equal to 200 milligrams and there are 142 carats to an ounce. Carats are further subdivided into points. There are 100 points to a carat. For example, a 45-point diamond weighs less than half a carat. Because larger diamonds are quite rare, they have a greater value per carat.

Color — Although a diamond may be any color of the spectrum, grading a cut stone for color means deciding the amount by which it deviates from the whitest possible (truly colorless). Completely colorless, icy-white diamonds are rare, and therefore, more valuable. White diamonds with a tinge of blue — known as "blue white" are rarer still. The best way to see the true color of a diamond is looking at it against a white surface.

Although most diamonds are a shade of white, they do come in all colors — pale yellow, canary, pink, red, green, blue and brown. These are called "fancies," and they are valued for their depth of color, just as white diamonds are valued for their lack of color. The famous Hope Diamond is blue, and the well-known Tiffany Diamond is canary.

The alphabetical scale used for grading is from colorless which starts at "D" on the scale to a more intense color as it descends on the scale to "Z." Even though diamonds are found in most colors, they normally tend to the yellow and brown tones, and decrease in value as they descend the scale.

Clarity — A diamond's clarity is determined by taking into account the number, size, placement, color and nature of any internal "inclusions" or external surface irregularities. Inclusions are nature's birthmarks — imperfections such as spots, bubbles or lines — included in the stone when it was crystallized from carbon millions of years ago. These marks make each stone unique, for no two diamonds have the same inclusions in the same places. When inclusions do not interfere materially with the passage of light through the stone, they do not affect its beauty. However, the fewer the inclusions, the more valuable the diamond. Under Federal Trade Commission rules, a diamond can be called "flawless" only when no imperfections are visible to a trained eye under 10 power magnification and in good light. Gemological Institute of America (GIA) quality analysis system is the most widely used for grading gemstones in the United States. Clarity is graded according to the relative position of the diamond on the Flawless-to-Imperfect scale.

The GIA scale is as follows:
VVS1 and VVS 2 — very, very slight imperfections.

VS 1 and VS 2 — very slight imperfections.

SI 1 and SI 2 — slight imperfections.

I 1, I 2 and I 3 00 imperfect.

Diamonds/

Cut — Diamonds are cut according to an exact mathematical formula. A finished diamond has 58 "facets," which are the small, flat polished planes cut into a diamond, so that the maximum amount of light is reflected back to the viewer's eye. This reflection is called "brilliance," and is extremely important in evaluating the quality of a diamond. The widest circumference of a diamond is the "girdle." Above the girdle are 32 facets plus the "table," the largest and topmost facet. Below the girdle there are 24 facets plus the "culet," or point. Cut also deals with the shape of the diamond. Traditional shapes are round, emerald, marquise, pear, oval and heart.

Taken out of context, it is impossible to grade a stone when only using one of the four "C's." All the above standards are for quality alone, and have no direct bearing on value until each are applied to a specific price and quality standard of each of the four "C's" individually.

When shopping around you must consider the four "C's" to get an accurate comparison price. Some stores do have their own grading system, so you will have to ask for the GIA equivalent. So your question to a jeweler may be "I would like a price for a quarter carat pear shaped diamond, SI 1 clarity and E in color." Remember if you change one of these variables such as the color the price will change accordingly. The four "C's" are standard that everybody understands. Like any other piece of jewelry prices of diamonds do vary considerably, so shop around before you buy.

Mini-Glossary of Diamond Terms

Baguette — a rectangular-shaped small diamond often used to enhance the setting of a larger stone.

Channel setting — type of setting often used in mounting a number of smaller stones of uniform size in a row. Stones are not held by individual prongs but rather continuous strips of metal forming a channel into which are fitted the outer edges of the row of stones.

Fancy Cut — a diamond cut other than round, such as baguette, emerald, triangle, pear, star.

Pave — a type of setting in which a number of small stones are set as closely together as possible to appear as an all-diamond surface without any metal showing.

Solitaire — the mounting of a single gemstone.

Tiffany Setting — a four or six-prong setting generally round in shape and flaring out from the base to the top, having long slender prongs that hold the stone.

Panel votes self out of existence

By Kimberly Heinrichs

It didn't even have to vote to obliterate itself; the bylaws took care of that.

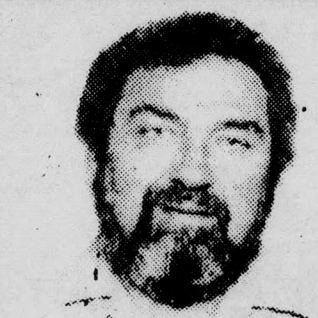

Barring unforeseen problems, the recent annual meeting of Ontario-Upland Treatment Plant Authority trustees was to be the last.

After 20 years, the authority, which oversees payment of bonds issued for an Ontario sewage-treatment plant, will cease to exist.

The four-member authority was two members short at its 3 p.m. starting time, but the arrival of Bob Bottoms a few minutes later resulted in a quorum, allowing the group to conduct a meeting. Agency Chairman Paul Hottel said the fourth member, Dwight Bert, couldn't be reached.

A fifth seat on the board never was filled when the representative died about five years ago.

So Hottel, Vice Chairman Don Wight and Secretary Bottoms were there for the customary annual 15-minute meeting.

(House of Tools)

For an excellent sanding block, glue 1/4" thick sheet of cork to the underside of a 3/4"x2 1/2"x4" piece of plywood. The cork has the ideal resiliency for backing up sandpaper.

A chair rung hole that's bored a bit oversized can be a problem because most adhesives require good surface contact between the mating parts. If you're faced with this problem, try using epoxy glue. Epoxy will form a string joint even without good surface contact.

If you use a stationary disc sander or a sanding disc with a table saw to sharpen chisels, be sure to clean out all sawdust from the machine as the sparks generated by sharpening can easily set the sawdust aflame.

Amazing entertainment for the entire family! Turn Robo Jr. on and he greets you by saying "hello." Then select either "stay" or "walk" mode. In the "stay" mode, the hand-held transmitter controls his actions. He'll wait for you to tell him which direction to go in the "walk" mode, he'll move forward until he runs into an obstacle or you change his direction. If he bumps into something, he speaks and automatically changes direction. Flip the "follow" switch and he'll follow you anywhere you go. And he'll automatically change directions whenever you do. But watch out! Robo Jr. is a playful robot. He has two kinds of characters: "good" and "bad." When he's a good robot he'll follow you anywhere. But when he's a bad robot he moves away from you and says "catch me." You can make Robo Junior talk by pressing either of his hands down. Use his carry tray to have him bring you things like toys, pencils or candy. 15-foot control range. 10 7-1/2" high. Requires one 9" and a "D" battery. 80-2297

Programs scheduled at county regional parks

San Bernardino County's regional parks in the West Valley will be well used in 1987, according to the schedule of events released last week.

Highlights include two big events in July; another Summerfest rock concert at Glen Helen Regional Park near Devore; and the opening of a waterslide at Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park in Ontario.

The first big event, a President's Kite Fly, is scheduled in February for Glen Helen, according to Steven Messerli, the director of the county's regional parks department.

Messerli's schedule includes the month of each event but not the exact dates.

In March, Arbor Day festivities will be held at Glen Helen, Prado and Prado Tiro parks.

An Easter egg hunt is scheduled for Glen Helen, Prado and Cucamonga-Guasti parks in April, Messerli said.

The National Rifle Association

championship shooting competition will be held at the Prado-Tiro skeet ranges in June, while the same site will host the Firemen's Olympics in July. That same month July 4 fireworks displays will be held at Prado and Glen Helen and a new swimming pool will be opened at Glen Helen.

In October, an Octoberfest celebration is scheduled for Glen Helen, the Rancho Cucamonga Grape Harvest Festival is scheduled for Cucamonga-Guasti and the Grand Prix of Shooting is set for Prado-Tiro.

Empire Bank to move main office to Ontario

Empire Bank has received permission from the Comptroller of the Currency to relocate its main and administrative offices to the Ontario Financial Center at 800 N. Haven Ave., Ontario.

The move from Empire's present office at 8505 Haven Ave., Rancho Cucamonga, will take place this spring, according to Empire Board Chairman William "Bill" McIntyre Jr.

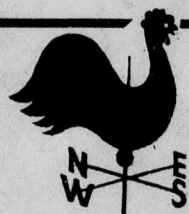

"Because Rancho Cucamonga is so special to us, it was a very difficult decision for our board. Nonetheless, we felt the advantages of the more accessible, much larger quarters will further enhance our business-oriented philosophy and benefit our customers. We do plan to keep the Empire Bancorp offices in Rancho Cucamonga, however. They will remain on Arrow Route," McIntyre said.

Chartered as a California full-service financial corporation in 1982, Empire Bancorp established Empire Bank, a National Association, in Rancho Cucamonga in June 1983.

"Since the bank's founding, we've experienced a very strong growth pattern," said Empire President Richard Jett. "At the end of 1986, Empire's assets exceeded $62 million."
